ADA PROFITS IN STREET PAVING DURING SEASON

Hundred Thousand Dollars
Spent in City During Past Year.

ADA STREETS ROCKED

Coming Year to See More Paving Projects Under Way Here.

One hundred thousand dollars on street improvement was spent in Ada during the past twelve months, according to a rough estimate made today by Walter Smith, street commissioner, in summing up the activities of his department during the year which closes Saturday.

The streets of the city were put in better condition during the year than in any twelve month period on record, he believes. It is pointed out that the greater portion of the money spent was for paving work and graveling streets.

Paving projects which were completed within the twelve months period include North Mississippi, South Townsend, South Broadway, West Seventeenth and South Stockton.

More than 100 blocks of street have been gravelled. It is shown. The gravel in some places has withstood two wet seasons and is still in good condition. The material is obtained near the city and has proven one of the cheapest and most satisfactory improvements the city has experienced.

Paving to Continue Next Year.

Mr. Smith was optimistic for the prospects of the coming year. "We have great hopes for a year of steady progress," he said. "I expect to see many more streets paved, a bigger and better water system, and to see all streets not paved under cover of gravel within the next twelve months, unless something unforeseen turns up."

He was of the opinion that from 35 to 50 blocks of street will be paved during the coming year. One project for six and one-half blocks is now being considered and contract will be let in the near future, it is expected. Five and one-half blocks are being paved on West Main street, nine blocks are eligible on Rennie and some paving work is expected to be done on Broadway, Stockton, Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Tenth and probably sixteenth streets he said.

It is probable that within the next year at least one hundred blocks will be gravelled. The test of the gravel work has been sufficient to promote interest in it, Mr. Smith believes. The cost is low enough to put it within reach of practically all property owners.

Mr. Smith turned from the street matter to a consideration of the water situation. "We have plenty of water now," he said. "I am afraid, however, that with summer we will have another shortage. The line to Byrd's Mill now in use is an old one and may give down."

Engineers who have investigated the matter declared it will be possible to install a pipe line to Byrd's Mill large enough to bring the entire output of the springs to Ada. The line can be operated on a gravity flow plan, engineers explain. In case the city increases rapidly in a necessity within the year, it is believed.

FIRE CONSUMES OSAGE OIL TOWN

Four Buildings Burned in the Heart of Chydler;
No Insurance.

(By the Associated Press)

PONCA CITY, Dec. 28.—A hotel and three business houses on the main street in Chydler, in the Osage oil field district, were totally destroyed by fire starting at six o'clock this morning. The flames originated from a defective flue on the Palace Hotel and spread rapidly to adjoining buildings. All were of frame construction. The total loss is estimated at approximately $50,000. There was no insurance.

Flames were breaking through the roof of the hotel when discovered. A large number of roomers were asleep in the building. Several pistol shots were fired as an alarm and all occupants of the hotel escaped, many of them in their night clothing. Several hundred men helped remove furniture and merchandise from the building, though little was saved.

Chydler has no fire equipment and no effort was made to extinguish the fire, which consumed four buildings in little more than a half hour. A two story brick building at the north end of the block prevented the flames from spreading to other frame structures.

Chydler has a population of approximately 4,000 and its property value amounts into the millions. The town is little more than a year old.

Tug Sent Out to View Wreck Said to Be Fated Boat

(By the Associated Press)

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Dec. 28.—There was an air of expectancy here today pending receipt of a report from a tug ordered sent from Erie, Pa., by the Great Lakes Towing company to view the wreckage reported to have been seen in Lake Erie near that city yesterday. The derelict is believed to be that of the tug Cornell, which with seven members of the crew, has been missing a week.

Two aviators from the air mail service field here reported late yesterday they had sighted what appeared to be the hull of a boat five miles east of Erie. The machine was flying at an altitude of from 300 to 400 feet because of the fog and they declared they saw the boiler and machinery above the water.

It was announced at a meeting of the board of trustees in New York yesterday that $800,000 of the amount had already been contributed and that another $100,000 was expected in reports not yet in hand.

HARDING OPENS FIGHT ON BORAH

Urges Senate to Reject His Proposal for Parley;
Lodge to Aid.

(By the Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—President Harding asked the senate today to reject Senator Borah's proposal for a new international economic conference, saying in a letter to Republican Leader Lodge that formal congressional action on the subject now would embarrass him in negotiations he already is conducting looking to such a conference.

As to further armament limitation negotiations, also provided for in the Borah plan, President Harding warned against what might be a "jester of promise to the world which cannot be fulfilled until the nations directly concerned express their readiness to co-operate to such an end."

Senator Lodge later told the senate that he could not state "explicitly" the nature of the administration's negotiations for a conference, but was authorized to say they did not include cancellation of the allied debt. He said the president told him the administration was opposed to cancellation but inclined to favor longer moratorium and interest payments.

JUDGING STARTED IN ANNUAL POULTRY SHOW

The show will be open day and evening until Saturday, those in charge announced today. The place of the show is just across the street from the Harris hotel.

MYSTERY DEATH YET UNSOLVED

Brooklyn Authorities Claim
Girl Slain by Playmate; Man Being Held.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Brooklyn's keenest detectives, puzzled for a solution of the mysterious shooting of Theresa McCarthy, 10 year old school girl in her home Tuesday, took note of the slight upward turn of the .22 caliber bullet that pierced her heart, disclosed by the autopsy, and today inclined more to the theory that another child of similar age and size was responsible for the tragedy.

The deduction was that the bullet's course would have been downward, rather than upwards, had an older and taller person fired the shot, and in this belief the search was continued for one of Theresa's playmates, frightened into silence by the terrible consequences.

The police have in custody James P. Grace, of Brooklyn, 25, a collector, on complaint of the father of sixteen year old Bronx girl, who was attacked by a man in the hallway of her home December 6. The prisoner, the police said, is being investigated in connection with a similar complaint concerning a girl on East Eighty-ninth street, Manhattan, two days later and also in the case of the McCarthy girl. Thus far however, nothing has been established, the police said, to connect this man with the Brooklyn mystery.

The slain child's mother has been unable to aid the police in identifying any persons she thinks may have entered the house to see Theresa while she was alone during the day. She had asked her to permit no boys in the house during her absence.

SMALL BIBLE IS EXHIBITED HERE

Publication Smaller Than Postage Stamp Complete in 520 Pages.

A growing interest in the study of the Bible was being felt in Ada yesterday after M. H. Livingston of Oklahoma City permitted his miniature publication to bear inspection of Ada curio seekers.

The Bible, two-thirds the size of a postage stamp and with a quarter inch thickness is accredited the smallest Bible in the world.

The publication printed in type which appears a blur to the naked eye is divided in two column pages and contains 520 pages under the cover labeled New Testament. The print is visible only under a high-powered microscope.

The Bible was printed in Glasgow, Scotland in 1895 and purchased by J. Francis Ruggles of Boston, a wealthy curio seeker and brought to New York. It was handed down to a daughter and remained in her possession until recently when it was purchased by Livingston and brought to Oklahoma City.

To dispel the idea that the Bible was photographed, Livingston placed it in the hands of chemists who gave a thorough examination and pronounced the sheets printed separately. The separate sheets of the Bible are thinner than tissue paper.

Livingston also added to the appropriateness of his find, a miniature church, 11 by 18 inches. In the miniature, church pews, pipe organ and other parts of a church are included in the small edifice.

Livingston represents the Universal Film company and has many friends here.

McKIN LOSES FIGHT

Authorities Declare Masked Men Can Be Identified
by State Witnesses.

BASTROP, La., Dec. 28.—Chief interest in the Morhouse kidnapping case was shifted today to New Orleans where Governor John M. Parker is scheduled to hold a conference with Attorney General Cocco and Special Prosecutor St. Clair Adams, appointed by the governor to assist the attorney general in presenting the state's case at the open hearing to be held here January 5 to discuss policies to be adopted at the hearing.

A warrant for the arrest of Dr. B. M. McKoin who is held in Baltimore at the request of Governor Parker was issued here yesterday, charging him with implication in the mob activities here.

The masked mob, who kidnapped Daniels and Richards was composed of about 75 men, according to an investigator, who has been following the case for several months. Members of the mob, it was asserted, came from Morhouse, "Ouchita, West Carroll, Richland and Franklin parishes and two counties in Arkansas. The identity of practically every member of the mob it was said, is known to the authorities, and it was expected that many more arrests will be made.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 28.—Dr. B. M. McKoin, former mayor of Mer Rouge, La., today lost his fight for immediate release of habeas corpus proceedings. He was remanded "without prejudice to give the Louisiana authorities opportunity to present their case."

Dr. McKoin was arrested here Tuesday at the request of Governor Parker of Louisiana, who accused him of murder in connection with the Morhouse parish kidnapping last August.

Three judges of the Baltimore supreme bench sitting in the city court, denied Dr. McKoin the right of bail.

A dispatch from Attorney General Cocco of Louisiana, to state's Attorney Leach stated that Dr. McKoin had been charged with the murder of Wait Daniels and Thomas Richards. The dispatch added that a deputy sheriff was on his way to Baltimore with the necessary papers in the case.

The fight against extradition may be carried to the federal supreme court, Attorney Carmen indicated today.

Many telegrams, some of them having passed between Governor Parker of Louisiana and Governor Ritchie of Maryland, were read during the habeas corpus proceedings.

English Scientists Prove Sugar Can Be Made from Soda Water

(By the Associated Press)

LONDON.—Sugar may today be obtained from soda water, the aerated beverage which flows from nickel plated faucets in thousands of drug and candy stores throughout the country, according to two English scientists who for nearly three years have been conducting laboratory experiments with the idea of duplicating artificially the work done by plants in self-nourishment.

It always has been a scientific mystery how living plants build up the sugar, necessary for their growth, from the carbon dioxide or carbonic acid, a component part of the atmosphere, which they absorb, by mixing it with carbohydrates and the starch universally found in plants.

Their experiments convinced the scientists, Professor E. C. Baly and Professor Heilbrunn, that not only is it possible to produce formaldehyde from soda water by the action of very short wave length light, but that it is also possible to produce formaldehyde with ordinary sunlight in the presence of malachite green or other appropriate coloring matter.

Carrying their investigation a little farther they succeeded, by acting upon soda water with ultraviolet rays, in building up sugar. They found that formaldehyde turns directly into sugar. The yield of sugar may be increased by heightening the concentration of carbon dioxide with sodium carbonate.

Snow crystals usually increase in size with increase in the temperature in the air.

Polo Old Game in Japan
TOKIO, Nov. 1.—Japan may in a few years have a team competing for the polo championship. For centuries Japanese have played a game of polo, which, while akin to the game of that name known to westerners, in that it is played on horseback, has few other points of similarity. Now the officers and officials of the Imperial Household have taken up the game as played in America and England and under the instruction of Captain R. W. Russell, honorary attache of the British Embassy, are gaining some efficiency.

Indiana Lady Says She Was Run-Down, Suffered With Her Back, Took Cardui, and Got Well.

Richmond, Ind.—"I thought I would write a line or so, to say that I owe my good health and strength to Cardui," says a letter from Mrs. Cora Courtney, 31 Railroad Street, this city.

"I was all run-down until my family thought they would lose me," writes Mrs. Courtney. "My husband coaxed me to take Cardui, so, to please him, I did, and will say I do not regret it, for I am able to do all my work and do my shopping."

"I have five children, four in school, my husband and a boarder to do for, and I do all my own work for all of us, and find time to play. We all praise Cardui. Every sick and run-down woman should take this wonderful medicine."

"I suffered with my back; a very weak feeling in my limbs."

"I felt hardly able to drag just tired—so tired all the time."

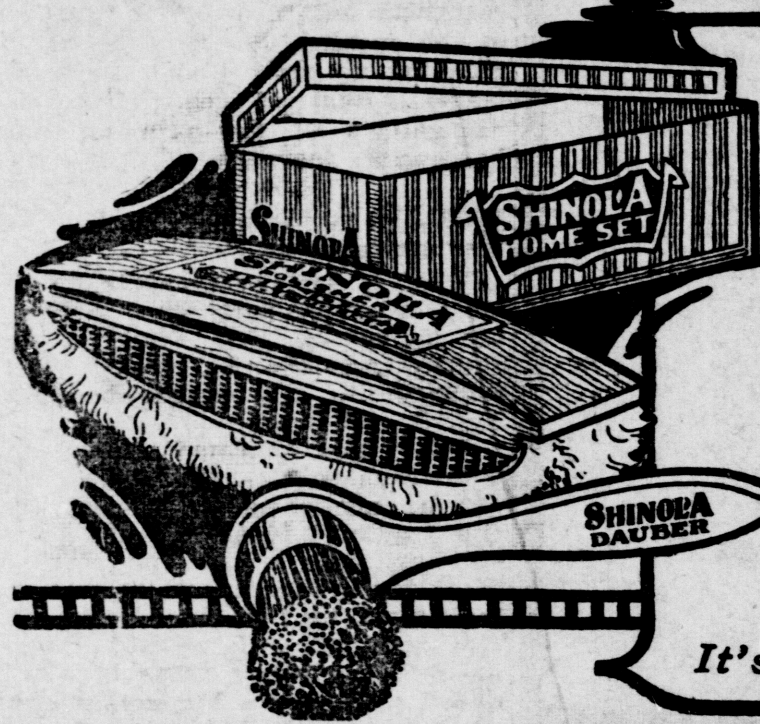

"It was an effort for me to do anything, but Cardui helped me so I felt like a different woman."

If you are in a run-down physical condition, suffering as this Indiana lady says she did, give Cardui a fair trial. You should feel good.

A TRIBUTE TO THE REPORTER

In these days when politicians complain of the "unfairness" of the newspapers and radicals among the labor unions rail at what they are pleased to term the "capitalistic press," it is rather refreshing to read the recommendations of the United Mine Workers of America to the coal fact find commission recently appointed by President Harding.

This commission has been created to find out the facts about the coal industry and particularly to arrive at the causes of so many strikes in that branch of industry. It is made up of outstanding men. Its business is not to decide wage or working questions or settle grievances but merely to find out the truth. The government hopes that once it can find out really what are the causes, remedial measures may be instituted and the Nation saved the consequences of mine tieups which have been all too numerous.

The Mine Workers' officials have suggested to this commission—in fact recommended—that in its investigations of the real causes of the trouble that it employ as its investigators newspaper reporters, and in addition to setting forth its reasons for this recommendation the union officials pay a stinging tribute to the newspaper reporters and through them to the press that the radicals constantly refer to as "capitalistic." The union suggests that the commission hire competent reporters, "not the kind that are usually out of a job, but the kind who always have a job because of their ability as reporters, and in addition to setting forth its reasons for this recommendation to the union officials pay a striking tribute to the newspaper reporters and through them to the press that the radicals constantly refer to as "capitalistic." The union suggests that the commission hire competent reporters, "not the kind that are usually out of a job, but the kind who always have a job because of their ability as reporters and news gatherers."

Continuing, the recommendation adds: "Because of their intensive training as searchers after actual facts, these men would come as near to finding out the cold, bald truth as any set of investigators that could be assigned to the task and no investigator is believed more unprejudiced than the newspaper reporter. They might not be as academic in the handling of theories and statistics as some others, but they would find out what is wrong."

Miners' union officials probably know the newspaper reporter better than the officials of any other union. They have had more dealings with the members of the press than any other. They have seen them at work in the mine fields in every section of the country and the tribute paid to them in this recommendation is worth all the more as having come from them.

Attacks on newspapers by politicians are ancient. The public has long since ceased to be fooled by them. The charge that newspapers of the country are dominated by capital is much more recent, though just as unfounded. If anything were necessary to refute it, the recommendations of the miners' union would prove sufficient. When it says that no investigator is as unprejudiced as the newspaper reporter and none more indefatigable in searching out the real facts, it pays almost as great a tribute to the fairness of the newspapers as a whole as it does to the reporters.

It shows, too, that while persons in the heat of a political campaign, an industrial upheaval or a bitter controversy are prone to make reckless charges against all newspapers, that when time comes for sober reflection they must recognize that the newspapers after all have been fair and have sought to get the real facts and lay them before their readers, without prejudice to any cause.

Truly, the honest, hard working, unprejudiced reporter—and he's in the vast majority these days—is coming into his own.—Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Emboldened by the ease with which they made the allies hand over territory occupied by them since the armistice, the Turks have arrogantly demanded that the allies get out of Constantinople at once and have notified them that ships will not be permitted to pass through the straits without the O.K. of the Ankara government. The British have refused for the time being to accede to these demands but it remains to be seen if they have the nerve to stick to it. In view of the meekness with which the allies have submitted to the demands thus far made by the Turks these gentlemen doubtless wonder why they did not follow different tactics long ago. The Turks now realize that they have been easy marks and will lose no time in taking advantage of their newly gained knowledge.

The Forum of the Press

An Alleged Shortage

(Dearborn Independent)
Certain sections of Big Business are beginning a campaign for the abandonment of immigration restrictions, alleging a threatened shortage of common labor. The inconsistency of this with high tariff legislation to keep out the product of European labor is so apparent that a mere allusion should be sufficient. It is the paradox of economics that Big Business claims to champion the American wage earner by excluding the product of foreign factories, while bringing into direct competition here the foreign labor itself. It is equally paradoxical to expect to maintain an American wage level, with the foreign market closed or partially closed in retaliation.

But the plan is neither paradoxical nor inconsistent, when the motive is realized. Big Business seeks cheap labor, not only to gain larger profits, but to hold the threat of unemployment over American workmen. Nothing so subdues a worker as an army of job hunters hungry for his place. So, the emergency Congress is to be called upon to open wide the gates, not to actual immigrants desirous to make homes and become citizens, but to hordes of every class who cross the ocean only to gather together what seems to them a fortune, with which some day to return to the homeland and a life of ease they could never wrest from home employment.

They will endure privations here for a time to amass the means of enjoying the future. Many will be disappointed, for the lure is a false one; many will become, if not already, recruits to the rank of the lawless; many will return dependent, while our own labor will be degraded. But if Big Business wins, the transatlantic liners will be crowded, and unscrupulous immigration agents, will reap a large harvest.

The process is simple, but sure, as experience of the past teaches.

The Turkish Revolution

(Oklahoma Journal)
Not a great deal of excitement seems to have been created by the decision of the Turkish Ankara government to abolish the sultanate. Eight years ago, when crowned heads rested more easily than they do now, it would have been considered a political movement of greatest importance. Today, however, the world is not particularly interested in the sultan or what becomes of him. His throne has been on its last legs since the end of the war. His government has had but little authority in Turkish affairs. The demand of the Nationalists, if it is carried out, will be merely the sweeping away of the ashes of a once potent and influential monarchy.

But while the fate of the sultan may not be of importance, the rise of the Nationalist government at Ankara is. That government is the direct result of European policies in Turkey. Had the powers at the peace conference not decided upon a program of Turkish partition, the sultan still might have been sitting on a stable throne.

The Nationalist movement began shortly after the armistice. First it organized only an army, with no thought of establishing a separate and defacto government. But as the discontent grew over the Allied occupation of Constantinople, there were demands for a new and more democratic government. The result was the establishing of the regime at Ankara, with Mustapha Kemal Pasha at the head. This government grew in power and influence, and has been the real ruling power in Turkey since January, 1921.

A national assembly was called and in it were vested the powers of government. Kemal was elected president of the government. The assembly is composed of directly elected representatives from all parts of the nation, including Thrace, Constantinople and Smyrna.

The new government has been busy since its organization. It has upset the Allied plans for the partition of Turkey, and has gained the sympathy of all the Moslem nations. It was a Nationalist army which routed the Greeks and the Nationalist government which reached the armistice agreement with European powers. Ankara, and not Constantinople, is the center of the Moslem world.

Since the original purpose of the movement in Turkey, it is surprising that the demand for the abdication of the sultan had not come sooner. It is likely that it will avail the sultan little to resist. When he goes, Turkey will have a republican government, although it cannot be said that such a government promises to remove the Turkish problem from world consideration.

NEWSNOTES FROM MOVIELAND

Two years ago Nita Naldi, who recently signed a five-year contract to appear in Paramount pictures, was not known in motion pictures. Today she is probably one of the best known women on the screen as a result of her excellent work as Dena Sol in Rodolph Valentino's first starring picture, "Blood and Sand."

Her entrance in motion picture work all happened by chance. It was during the filming of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" at the Fifty-sixth street studio of Famous Players, Director John S. Robertson needed some one to do a spanish dance in the picture, and one night he and John Barrymore attended the performance of the Century roof show in New York. When Nita Naldi, then a member of the Shubert chorus, came on the stage Barrymore turned to Robertson and said: "There's the girl we want. The exotic one, third from the left end." Miss Naldi was sent for, and she made her debut on the screen in the picture with Barrymore. Since then she has been playing in pictures occasionally, having played the role of Passion in George Fitzmaurice's production of "Experience." Her big chance came in "Blood and Sand" and she made the best of it. She is at present appearing with Alice Brady in "Anna Ascends."

This is one way they break into motion pictures.

MODEST LANGUAGE

It is said that in all William Jennings Bryan's speech making, he has never used a word or expression that would cause the most modest woman to blush. One of the great English writers a few years ago gave to the world this little gem:

"Immodest words admit of no defense,
For want of decency is want of sense."

Some newspaper writers and many story tellers think they must use immodest words or even vulgar words in order to entertain. If they would only take time to run over the works of the great English writers, they would see how far wrong they are. Shakespeare's vulgarities have been forgotten while those beautiful passages of love and philosophy are immortal. Burns wrote the most immodest poems in the language, but the things of Burns which are remembered are those touching songs of love and family worship.

Realizing these things, the modern newspaper writer, if he values his reputation and the reputation of his publication, uses modest language at all times. The Associated Press, the greatest news gathering organization in the world, has ably expressed the right ideal along this line:

"News values at times compel The Associated Press to transmit crimes and divorces that are sordid, and sometimes circumstances make it impossible to ignore completely details that are suggestive. But never should the sordid, the salacious or the suggestive be used in their own account. Never should they appear if it is possible to eliminate them. In the exceedingly rare cases where such details cannot be avoided, they should be stated in a manner calculated to give the least possible offense. The reasons for any such references is our report should invariably be impelling. Otherwise, strike them out. There is no excuse whatever for stressing their sensational value."

"The fact that the news in virtually every story can be told without using salacious or suggestive details has been established. If it does become our duty to report unpleasant crimes, meretricious relations, or moral baseness, on account of the impelling news value surrounding the circumstances, or the importance of the persons involved, our recitals must be on as high a plane as it is possible to place them."

"Instructions to this effect have been issued to all superintendents and correspondents."

PROSPERITY WITH RESERVATIONS

The business outlook for 1923 is "prosperity with reservations," says a dispatch from Washington. These reservations, in the opinion of leading economists, governmental and otherwise, are:

1. What happens in Europe during the next few months.

2. What the attitude of the American consumer is going to be toward rising commodity prices.

We may be permitted to add to this wisdom from the seat of the Government that the second will depend very largely on the first. The exports of the past year to Europe have been chiefly of cotton and grain. Prices have been maintained in the case of cotton, not because of a normal demand, but because of a shortage of European production, which is another way of saying a shortage of world supply. The question that arises now is whether an increased supply, especially of cotton, thru Europe sufficient to insure profitable prices. The answer to that question depends upon "what happens in Europe" means of the new crops of 1923, will find a demand in it. If the purchasing power of Europe is not increased in keeping with European needs during the coming year there will be grave danger that prices of cotton and wheat will not be maintained with an increased supply. And if prices of cotton and wheat are not maintained, other prices can not be maintained. The "attitude of the consumer toward rising commodity prices" is going to be determined very largely by the prices of cotton and wheat. And the prices of cotton and wheat are going to be determined very largely by what happens in Europe.

May we suggest also that "what happens in Europe" is going to be determined to a very great degree by the attitude of the American Government toward the problems which Europe faces?—Fort Worth, Tex., Star-Telegram.

If the weather man continues to be friendly to us here, southern California will lose its charm for Oklahomans.

People usually regard their own faults and habits as they do their children—thank the Lord that they are not as bad as those of their neighbors.

Too Much Attention Paid
Bare Study and Not Foundation, Said.

(By the Associated Press)
CHICAGO, Dec. 27.—The purpose and character of public high school commercial education has been too restricted, it has concerned itself too narrowly to courses in business technique and has neglected to give students the proper background and understanding of business conduct and relations, declared Glen Levin Swigert, of the U. S. Bureau of Education speaking here tonight on business education in the public schools, before the National Commercial Teachers Federation.

"The problem in business education today is to co-ordinate skill and information, method and knowledge," he stated.

"Business education is not easy to define," Mr. Swigert said. "That condition will prevail until it becomes more of a science or a profession. Recent years have seen much done to give scientific character and professional aspect to business, its conduct and procedure. Colleges and universities have instituted research departments for the study of production processes, marketing methods and devices and systems used in business procedure. As a result, the theory of economics is now applied in many directions by the institutions in preparation for well defined business careers."

"For example, many universities are offering courses in accounting, advertising and merchandising, banking and finance, insurance, foreign trade and consular service, organization and management and transportation. The scientific study of business problems involved will lend to a statement of principles and laws, and a definite fund of information governing new business procedure which will bring new subjects for study in the field of business education."

Woman Chief of Kaw Indians Would Fight For Tribe's Interest

PONCA CITY, Okla., Dec. 28.—The Kaw Indians not only have given the women the right to vote, but have elected one of their number to the highest office in the tribe, that of elective chief. The woman is Mrs. Lucy Taylah Eads, now Chief Lucy to all her tribesmen.

Chief Lucy is the first head of the Kaw Indians have had since 1908 when Chief Washunga was frozen to death. She is the wife of John R. Eads, a white man. The two with their children live on the new chief's allotment, an inheritance of eight hundred acres. They are among the few who have not disposed of any of their property. They raise livestock of all kinds, are thrifty and send their children to the white schools.

"The best material for the job" is the way the Indians describe Chief Lucy. and John Eads, who is a cousin of James Buchanan Eads, who built the Eads bridge across the Mississippi river at St. Louis, proudly takes his place as husband of the chief. "She is an excellent wife, a fine mother, the best nurse living and understands the needs of her people," he says.

Lucy Taylah with her brother, Emmett, were adopted years ago by led Washunga, who led the Kaw Indians from their lands in Kansas in 1873 to a new allotment in Oklahoma territory. He sent them to Haskell institute, after they had completed the tribal schools. Here Lucy distinguished herself as a student and became interested in nursing. After her graduation from Haskell, she went to New York City and became a graduate nurse. She remained there several years and then returned to her own people. Her brother also lives in the Kaw country, near the little village of Washunga, named after the old tribal chief.

The Kaws, like many other Indians, have sold and dissipated their holdings and are now reduced to poverty. Although their lands join those of the rich Osage, and oil derricks can be seen rising in the distance, the Kaws have reaped no mineral benefits as yet. A number of tests have gone down, but oil in paying quantities have not been found.

Chief Lucy has announced that the principal task of her administration will be pressing a claim of her tribe against the government for $15,000,000, which the Kaws alleged is due them as payment for lands they owned in Kansas before their migration to the Oklahoma territory. The Kaws declare the government offered them $1.25 an acre for the land, which was near Topeka, but that they received only ten cents an acre. The $15,000,000 they claim friendly neighbors, the Osages, have offered to advance enough money to the Kaws to enable them to send a delegation to Washington to press their claims.

All Kaw Indians possess a strain of French blood, running back to the early trappers and voyagers who settled among the Indians in the days of Marquette. The most prominent member of the tribe today is Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas, who, with his children today hold allotments in the Kaw reservation.

At the recent election of Chief Lucy an old tribal custom of having a barbecue was revived. Chief Lucy made and served the "squaw bread," considered a great delicacy by all Indians. It is made like a biscuit dough with the shortening omitted, rolled flat and cut into strips. These are dropped into large kettles of lard and cooked.

After the feast, Chief Lucy called her council together. She made her maiden speech, thanked her people for the great honor they had given her, the first woman to occupy so high a position in her tribe, and assured the Kaws that she would work for their interests.

The new chief spoke in English and some of the younger generations interpreted her speech for the older Indians. To-Jum-Wah, who is about seventy-years old and the only member of the tribe now living who came from the Kansas reservation, replied for them. His remarks were also interpreted for those who did not understand the Kaw language.

Pity Poor Pauline; Star and Husbands Can't Stay Married

(By Central Press)

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 27.—Once upon a time a popular song related in detail the perils of one Pauline; how the villain threw her in the sea; how he tied her to a tree; tossed her in a lion's den and a dozen other things.

The heroine of that touching bit of musical nonsense surely had enough troubles to keep any decent, respectable young lady busy, but at that she had nothing on Pauline Frederick, the statuesque movie beauty, and her marital troubles.

The only difference between the two is that in the song Pauline's came from an unusually persistent villain while the screen star's came from a variety of husbands who successively and speedily became obnoxious to the fair film goddess. All of which is preliminary to the fact that Pauline Frederick has just stepped out from under the marriage bonds which she contracted only last June with one Dr. C. A. Rutherford, wealthy Seattle physician.

At the time of the wedding it was rather baldly announced that it was a love affair pure and simple. Miss Frederick's press agents even went so far as to dwell upon the fact that the physician had known Miss Frederick from childhood. None of her other husbands had.

But the best laid plans of mice and press agents often fizzle and now comes the report, somewhat belated, but apparently authentic, that Pauline and Rutherford have separated, in fact that they have been separated for nearly four months.

Her friends even go so far as to say that they never even lived together as man and wife. Strange, if reports of the "love affair," if the marriage itself was not a publicity scheme say others.

Incompatibility is given as the reason for the separation but no mention of divorce plans has been made.

KONAWA LOSES TO ADA TIGERS

Last Practice Game to Be Played Before Road Trip.

KONAWA, Okla., Dec. 28.—(Special).—Showing unusual form and playing hard for advantage East Central Tigers Wednesday night trampled the National Guards here 17 to 12. The guards had defeated the Tigers on an Ada court some time previous to this game.

The game was hard fought from the beginning and no team had an advantage. The Tigers were able to take advantage of breaks and maintained a short lead when the game closed. Coach Thompson said the game would conclude his pre-season practice schedule.

Beginning early next week he will start working for the first road trip. Daily work-outs this week were in order and all the ten varsity men were kept in shape. No Christmas holiday was granted.

Previous to the game here Wednesday the players enjoyed a hunting trip and big feed. It was the first event in their honor given them so far this year. Some success was had on the trip.

The trip which Coach Thompson plans to take in the first week in January includes two games with Phillips University at Enid on January 3 and 4 and two games with Central Teachers College at Edmond on January 5 and 6, making four games for his first trip. From the standpoint of miles traveled this will be one of the two long trips to be taken by the teams this year.

Pauline Frederick.

Dr. Rutherford is once more at his Seattle home, perhaps even caring for his patients. Miss Frederick, his wife and second cousin, is starting in an Al Woods production.

Her palatial home in Beverly Hills is being occupied by her aunt and uncle.

The Good Girl
My mother says I must be good—
I am.
The best girl in the neighborhood
—I am.
She says I must be neat and trim
As well as modest, prudish ad prim.
As proper as a gospel hymn—
I am.
She says I must behave myself—
I do.
Leave bad books resting on the shelf—I do.
Eschew short skirts, avoid the dance
Abhor the naughty, flirty glance,
And run from everything in pants—
I do.
I mustn't do a thing amiss—
I don't.
I mustn't spoon, hold hands or kiss
—I don't.
And since I am such a precious one,
And from all wickedness I run,
You may not think I have much fun
—I don't.

CARO, MINE

By MILORED WHITE

(© 1922, Western Newspaper Union.)

Carolyn brought the stranger down the long hall of her ancestors. Ancestors do not, in modern days, hold the honored place of a bygone time. Both the great old house and the ancestral portraits had been thrust upon her. While one may not refuse such a generous legacy the remodeling would, she was sure, entail much thought and care. Hence, she called upon this fall day, the town's best architect to advise her, and it was he whom she led down the hall.

She had sent, in her loneliness, for Aunt Felice to come and make residence with her. Aunt Felice, she knew, felt that the estate should rightfully have belonged to her.

Estate and fortune, it happened, went together; so Carolyn took up residence in the wandering stone house in its great gardens.

James Bryan appeared much interested in the old portraits on the paneled wall. He paused before a beautiful painting of a lovely girl of a bygone day. Then, more deeply interested, he bent closer.

"Why," the architect exclaimed, "this painting is exceptionally good. A relative of yours, of course, Miss Fairfield?"

"Caro, Mine." She repeated it softly. "Yes, the portrait is that of my great aunt Carolyn, for whom I am named. I am told that it was my childish resemblance of my mother's aunt, which was responsible for the naming."

"It is true," he said slowly. "The resemblance is remarkable."

He stood back musingly regarding. "If you were a trailing dark gown, Miss Fairfield, instead of your modern short skirt, we might place you in the frame and deceive the artist himself."

"Poor artist," Carolyn sighed. "He was long ago killed in the war. Many times have I heard the story of his romantic love for great aunt Carolyn; it is as fanciful as it is sad."

The young architect lingered; he had tried to devise some plan of prolonging his visit with this charming young woman and grasped the opportunity. "Will you tell me the story?" he begged. "I am most interested."

Carolyn drew forth a chair. "First," she said, "we will have tea, in quite the old fashion, here in the hall. You have a chilly drive before you." "Now," she smiled, "for the story. Poor little great aunt Carolyn in the biggest house of Byron, was, in days past, as great a personage as a princess, to Byron inhabitants. Grandmother had told me, with tears in her voice, how Carolyn disgraced convention and her foolishly proud family as well, by making acquaintance with a 'commoner.' And not only did my dominated young aunt make acquaintance, but fell in love with a humble Irish lad. His name?—I have forgotten it."

Through her girlish school days the Irish lover adored the fine young lady from afar. Carolyn met him, it seemed, when one summer day she walked through her father's grounds and saw there a good looking young lad painting a picture. Stopping to admire this picture of woodland scenery, she came to know her 'Jimmy.' Their secret love-making had grown into the seriousness of an engagement, when her irate father discovered it, and under threat of disowning his venturesome daughter, forbade 'Jimmy' to see or speak, or even write one word of affection to Carolyn. What could the unhappy lad do but obey? Could he cost the one he loved above all others her home and fortune and family? In deep remorse for his 'presumption,' he begged her forgiveness and went away. Carolyn knew not where. His ambition, she knew, had been to become an artist. But he had no money to study. 'A shiftless dauber,' her father had contemptuously called the Irish lad. I can fancy poor Carolyn wandering disconsolate through these very halls, for her lover never came back. War at that time claimed people's thought. And one day Carolyn read among the dead of the battlefield his name.

"It was his kind-hearted mother who sent this painting over which 'Jimmy' had so lovingly and skillfully labored, from her shabby house near the station to the big house on the hill. And beneath his faithful memory portrait of his love the Irish lover had written his assurance of loyalty. 'Caro, Mine,' he inscribed it. 'Caro' was his lover's name for her."

The listener came to stand at the story teller's side. "I," he said abruptly, "am also an Irish Jimmy Bryan. It was my untaught uncle, years ago, who painted, with the inspiration of love, this portrait. And as you talked, I have been wondering, Miss Fairfield, if standards have changed much after all, where money is in the question, and the woman possesses, while the man has but his love to offer. Silence, it seems to me, would still be the toll of the presumptuous lover, even as in my uncle Bryan's day."

So it came to happen, as months passed, that this second Carolyn grieved that the man she had learned to love would not, in his humble pride, confess his love to her—until one day she came upon a little snapshot of herself which she had given him—lying where it had dropped from his pocket, and beneath the snapshot was written in James Bryan's plain script—"Caro, Mine." Just that, but again the message brought its happy assurance.

AMERICAN BASEBALL PLAYERS GO TO ORIENT AS EMISSARIES OF INTERNATIONAL SPORT

BASEBALL PARTY LEAVING VANCOUVER, B.C.

That baseball should ever assume the character of a medium for strengthening international ties, would have been considered a far-fetched fancy a few years ago. Yet that is just what it is doing today. Nations may develop stupendous trade and commerce with each other, may convene for discussion of programs for international laws and economics without bringing their peoples into more intimate relations.

It is only when sport is the medium that draws them together, when finance and the pocket-book are forgotten and when man meets man in friendly physical combat or mental competition, that they get to know and cherish each other, regardless of nationalities.

A striking instance of a sportsman's mission is the present tour of a team of American major league players in the Orient. When the S. S. Empress of Canada sailed from Vancouver on October 19th she carried the following players: Leslie Bush, Fred Hofmann and Waite Hoyt of the New York Yankees, Bib Falk and Amos Strunk of the Chicago White Sox, George Kelly, Emil Meusel and Arthur Nehr of the New York Giants; Hank Gowdy, a St. Louis Cardinal; Herbert Pennington, Red Sox of Boston; Luke Sewell and Riggs Stephenson, Cleveland Indians, while Bert Griffiths represented the Brooklyn Robins. They were accompanied by the wives of a number of the players and by several newspaper men.

The party is in charge of Herbert Hunter, baseball coach of Waseda and Keio Universities in Japan, with whose teams some class games are anticipated. Other games will be played in the Philippine and Hawaiian Islands. The touring players will visit Korea, Manchuria and China in addition to Japan and our island dependencies. Naturally, the visitors will be feted in the lands they visit and will enjoy especial opportunities of seeing and studying Oriental life. America may well be proud of these representatives who typify the best in American sport life.

Investigation Conducted To Determine Quality of Corn Aid By Fertilizer

(By the Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—In an effort to determine the reason for the preference of European countries for Argentine or flint corn to the corn produced in the United States, the Department of Agriculture through its bureau of chemistry is undertaking an extensive investigation. According to W. G. Campbell, acting chief chemist the investigation will be conducted thru a laboratory on crop chemistry. recently established, which will determine if there are any fundamental chemical differences in the composition of flint or hard corn and the dent corn largely produced in United States.

The laboratory will undertake studies on the composition of agricultural crops in a fundamental way. Additional work will be carried on concerning the influence of environment of the chemical composition of crops, including certain features of fertilization, such as the relation of chemical composition and food value of crops to the time of fertilizer application. Previous work has been directed chiefly toward the quantity viewpoint. The new work will be directed to quality.

"It is known, for instance," says Mr. Campbell, "that the application of certain fertilizer to a crop like corn will increase the yield quantitatively. However, practically nothing is known about quality relations; that is, whether the proteins, vitamins, or mineral components of the corn fertilized in such a way are better suited to animal and human nutrition than those of unfertilized corn. Varietal differences will be studied from a chemical standpoint."

"One of the most important researches now under way is that upon vegetable proteins. Inasmuch as nitrogen is an essential part of animal tissues and the animal can obtain this necessary nitrogen of feeds is of prime importance. This research involves the very existence of all animals and is inseparably connected with the field of nutrition."

"Until quite recently one kind of protein in a diet was considered as good as another. Today we know that one protein differs from another protein in certain fundamental constituents called amino acids, of which all proteins are composed. Some of the amino acids are absolutely essential for nutrition, for without them animals will not grow, but will soon fall and die. The protein in corn is deficient in two essential amino acids, tryptophane and lysine. A young animal on a diet having its sole source of protein derived from whole corn will not grow and develop properly. However if the protein in corn is supplemented by the addition in the right proportion of certain other proteins, the protein of the mixture will then be adequate for normal growth. It is essential not only to know whether in themselves, they are adequate for the needs of the animal but also to know when they are deficient, what other proteins, and in what proportion, must be added to supplement the deficiency. The percentage of nitrogen alone cannot therefore longer be regarded as an index of the protein value of a feeding stuff.

"The amino acids of the proteins of several agricultural products have been separated and studied with the result that it is now possible to supplement such basic feeding stuffs as corn with small quantities of other feeds, such as peanut meal, soybean meal, and coconut press cake, which, contain the very amino acids corn lacks, thus making a feed that will supply all the amino acids necessary for growth. The practical results of this should be a greater and more profitable utilization of our largest cereal crop, corn."

Work now in progress includes investigations of the protein of wheat bran, in which a method has been developed by which over 90 percent of the total protein in bran may be extracted: of cotton seed, peanuts, cantaloup seed, of soy beans, of palm-kernel meal and of lentils. Research on the protein in tomato seed, over 2,000 tons of which are discarded annually as a by-product for feeding purposes the conservation of a valuable feed can be accomplished.

Argentine Under Strain in Debts Reports Affairs

(By the Associated Press.)

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 27.—Argentina's unconsolidated public debt now amounts to $89,574,218 pesos, or roughly $340,000,000, according to figures submitted by the Accountant-General's department to the new minister of finance, Dr. Vegas, who sought the information to prepare the budget of 1923.

The figures are noted with surprise by some newspapers, which refer to former statistics indicating that the debt was some 184,000,000 pesos less. It appears from the report that the 184,000,000 consists of debts not subject to any precise term of payment, the remainder being represented by liabilities maturing at specific dates. A bill for the authorization of an internal loan to consolidate the debt, in whole or in part, is being considered by the Ministry of Finance in lieu of seeking a foreign loan.

HARVARD PLANS HISTORY OF WAR

Library Preparing Data on Progress of World War for Future.

(By the Associated Press.)

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 29.—The Harvard University Library has made effective progress in accumulating data of the World War which will enable the historian of the future to determine the exact disposition of the opposing military forces at all times throughout the period of active fighting. Detailed maps and airplane photographs form a nimportant part of the collection.

An official of the library, explaining the collection recently, pointed out that the fighting in France was in a region of which the French government had prepared detailed maps, showing houses, woods, fields, brooks, contours and every other feature.

"For the most part," he continued, "the trench warfare was sufficiently static to make it possible for the intelligence department of each army to prepare exact maps revealing the precise layout of enemy trenches, and to a great extent the disposition of machine guns, artillery, etc. The mechanical processes of making such maps from week to week or from day to day reached, during the war, a perfection hitherto unknown."

"The historian of the future will be able to take the French maps of their own and of the enemy's lines in a certain sector and the German maps of their own and of the French lines, all of which were prepared at frequent intervals, and by comparing them will be able to see exactly how the warfare in that sector progressed. He will not have to depend, as the historian of former wars depended, partly on personal recollections and impressions of where such and such a charge took place, and where the lines ran during such a week."

"We already have a large collection of such maps, in addition to hundreds of books and documents relating to military, economic and political conditions in the warring countries, ranging from complete files of Parole, the German army publication, official casualty lists and files of airplane photographs, to collections of war posters and official memoranda. We have a complete set of the official proclamations issued by the German government from June, 1914, to the armistice."

DISPOSAL OF IRISH WAR FUND HANGS ON FATE OF MAN

Stephen M. O'Mara.

Upon the life of Stephen O'Mara, formerly a trustee of the Irish republican fund deposited in New York and now a prisoner of the Irish Free State, hinges the disposal of the suit of the Free State to recover the $2,000,000 in securities. Free State attorneys have tied up the fund by injunction, which will be vacated unless O'Mara is brought to New York to testify at the hearing.

He is now acquiring the German confidential review of the foreign press. In getting material from Germany we have been greatly aided by Ellis L. Dresel, former American commissioner at Berlin, who is a Harvard graduate.

"We are trying, with the assistance of friends of the university and others who have valuable material at their disposal, to build up not merely an entertaining assortment of war documents, but a working collection of source material which will be of positive value to those in the future who may wish to study the precise progress of events and their underlying causes throughout the war."

Card of Thanks.

The United Charities Association takes this method of expressing their appreciation for the splendid way in which so many assisted in bringing cheer to the many homes during the Christmas season.

To all who directly or indirectly contributed funds, provisions and your time, etc., we thank you most heartily.

MISERY LURKS IN NEAR EAST

Population of Thrace in Dire Need; Rains and Snows Add to Plight.

(By the Associated Press.)

DEDEAGATCH, Western Thrace. Heavy snow, icy winds and intermittent rains have wrought great misery and suffering among the half million shelterless refugees scattered over Thrace and Macedonia. Unless help is prompt and generous the Greek and Armenian exiles in these areas will perish in large numbers. Already the majority are half-naked, starving and diseased. All the elementary needs of life are lacking. Food stocks in the towns are growing low. Famine must ensue this winter unless flour is sent in.

Human woe and wretchedness seldom have reached such levels. Large numbers are dying daily of exposure and inanition. The condition of the children and babies is pitiful. Infectious disease are rampant. Typhus is gaining such headway that it is feared the great epidemic of 1918-1919, which began at Cavala, will recur. Life in the East always has been cheap, but never so cheap as in this corner of Europe. Had the population been permitted to remain in Eastern Thrace and faced the Turkish invader, their lot could have been little worse.

When The Associated Press correspondent crossed the little river near Drama where Paul baptized the first Christian, he was assailed by a band of hunger-maddened Greek women and children who begged piteously for a crust of bread. They said they had been on the march for 24 days and were subsisting on beetroots. Although there was a foot of snow on the ground, many were shoeless, coatless and hatless. The blistered, bleeding feet of the children left red silhouettes in the snow.

In spite of many promises of help from the outside, little has been done to assuage the misery of these helpless exiles. Most of them are women and children. They are sadly in need of help.

Billions people need them.

SEVEN SUMMERS

By AGNES JOHNSON

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

It was a different Frank and Mae who were parties to this impromptu tete-a-tete. A lapse of six years had wrought the usual inevitable changes. Though scarcely thirty, there were sharp little lines across his forehead and about his eyes; and while she knew and successfully practiced the secret feminine art of concealing age, she looked a trifle wan, and in the swollen veins on her hands she saw indubitable evidence of her avowed purpose to do menial work rather than accept his help for the support of herself and child.

For they were victims of an unfortunate match, these two. The misunderstanding had come shortly after the birth of their baby girl, when Mae decided to "assert" herself. He was a canvasser in the dry goods line, and his wife had grown weary of being lonesome.

She wanted to be taken out and entertained like other girls, etc. Whereupon he explained that his absence was their livelihood, and ending with beautiful word pictures of comforts that were to come with assured future success.

But his plans had failed to materialize and he was forced to continue on the road. Alas, forbearance is a virtue seldom known to youth, so Frank and Mae awoke to find their dreams another theory gone wrong. An understanding being hopelessly out of the question, it was agreed that she should sue and he would not contest, her only stipulation being that she was to keep the child.

This unpleasant task being disposed of, they had gone their separate ways, and in time forgotten each other. And now, six years later, fate had decreed that Mae, accompanied by her little girl, should be at luncheon at this quiet tea room just off Main street and that Frank should walk in and sit directly opposite them.

"Mae!" He came to her and greeted her cordially. "Can I believe my eyes?"

He asked her much about herself and little girl, and she answered him with equal frankness. Then he told her, but beautifully, but with becoming dignified pride, of his long struggle and happy triumph. He was now established in business for himself and was doing well. Suddenly he turned to the child, who had left her seat and nestled herself, as children will, between her mother's knees, and stood looking on, very much baffled.

"What a charming little miss!" he declared, with just a touch of parental pride. "Let's see, Alice is seven now, isn't she?" He stopped for, man-like, he wasn't sure.

"Seven summers, to be exact," replied Mae. "She was born in June, you know."

"Um, yes. Quite a little lady now." He noticed Alice was staring at him, in her innocent way, and it made him uncomfortable.

A favorite trick of men who find themselves embarrassed in the presence of children is to give them money, and he paid liberally for the refuge. And of course he asked her what she would buy, and called her "my little girl." Alice looked up at her mother doubtfully, and said she didn't know yet. Then, with all the wisdom of her seven years, she turned to him quickly:

"If you please, I aren't your little girl."

Her parents were mildly amused at this precocious observation.

"Hush, dear," murmured Mae, stroking the child's hair affectionately. "Mr. Cole is your papa." Which deeply impressed Alice and caused her to become very thoughtful.

There was a brief lull in the conversation. Mae had said very little, for she seemed engrossed in retrospection. He wondered what was passing through her mind.

"Do you know," he said, ruefully, "there are times when I long—for—" The phrase died out as he looked away vacantly. Followed another pause, and the silence was growing awkward when Alice suddenly clapped her little hands exultantly, and exclaimed: "Are you my really and truly papa?"

"Yes, indeed," he nodded laughingly, and growing bold, he gently lifted her to a seat beside himself. His memory went back to the court ruling, and he recalled the peremptory decree giving Alice to her mother, exclusively and irrevocably.

"I have often wondered, Mae," he said softly, "how things—we were just kids, anyhow." A little clumsy, perhaps, but language that would have been clear to any woman.

"Is your courage good, Mae?" he pursued, encouraged by her silence. "Would you care to—?"

A chance observer would have been impressed by the spectacle they presented. For a long time not a word passed between the little party, for even the child, as if disciplined in accordance with a charming tradition, was seen, but not heard, but the setting was eloquent, for all its muteness.

Left to conjecture, it was a story without words, depicting the end of sorrow and the beginning of a ripe happiness in which two souls were reunited in perfect faith and trust; a repudiation of the act that would, because of a youthful error, put asunder the twin who before God were as one unto death.

WOODMEN OF WORLD FOUND SANITORIUM AS WAR MEMORIAL

WOODMEN SANITORIUM

OMAHA, Neb.—The Woodmen of the World, a national fraternal organization numbering 800,000 members, has begun the erection of a tuberculosis sanatorium at San Angelo, Texas. This will be the first of four such institutions for the treatment of members to be built in different states in the next year or two, according to W. A. Fraser, sovereign commander of the order.

The sanatorium will be known as "The Woodmen of the World War Memorial Sanatorium" and will be in honor of the members who made the "supreme sacrifice" in the world war. A monument to the dead heroes will be erected in front of the main group of buildings and will be inscribed with the name of every Woodman who died in the great conflict.

The Woodmen appropriated $100,000 to build this institution, with the proviso that a state with suitable climatic conditions appropriate an equal amount. This resulted in bids from Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, North and South Carolina, the two Virginias and New York, Texas won by the donation of a tract of land valued at $100,000.

The sanatorium will be a reconstruction and enlargement of an old Spanish mission. The main building will be 300 feet long by 50 feet wide and three stories high with broad verandas surrounding it on every floor, in which the patients will live in the open air. An administration building, a residence for the chief medical officer and cottages for nurses and assistants will complete the architectural group. It will be opened in the spring.

"The Woodmen will build four tuberculosis sanatoriums in different parts of the country instead of one national institution," said Mr. Fraser, "because we think it a better plan. Sufferers will not have to be transported a thousand miles but will find a curative institution within comparatively convenient distance of their homes."

"Sites for the sanatoriums we have planned have not yet been selected but the second, it is now expected, will be established at Saranac Lake, N. Y., in the Adirondack region. The order proposes later to build a home for its aged members and a home for its orphan and dependent children."

Those who enjoyed Mrs. Burton's hospitality were Misses Geraldine Hale, Marjorie Norris, Birdie Newton, Frances Case, Mozelle Hunter, Bessie Dell Meaders, Nellie Kearns, Lois Burton, Louise Meaders, Ruth Burton and the honorees, Gwyn Whiteman and Rebecca Sparks.

Decorations and programs were in keeping with the season. Special invitations to the DeMolay and Friends of the order were extended.

THE BALCONY GIRL

By MOLLIE MATHER

(© 1922, Western Newspaper Union.)

Stacy snapped out the light in his lonely hotel room and took the elevator downstairs. As he passed through the great hall he heard music coming from the direction of the balcony dining room and knew, that as usual, the evening guests were dancing.

Presently a low ejaculation attracted his attention. He had not noticed, in his absorbed entrance, a young woman already seated far back in the small balcony. Now, with her low exclamation, she drew back the rose-colored curtains and stood preparatory to depart.

The young woman reached for her soft, boyish hat and was slipping into her long, gray coat. She gathered, somewhat confusedly, a number of written pages from the chair, which she evidently had recently occupied.

Stacy arose detainingly. "Please," he said, "do not allow me to drive you away from your corner. I can find another secluded spot."

"It is necessary that I remain here for a time," she said. "Perhaps, if you, too, are comfortable in the balcony neither need disturb the other."

"Thank you," Stacy agreed. The young woman left the rose curtains slightly open. "The light does not disturb you?" she asked. "I, too, look down into the dancing hall occasionally."

"Not at all," Stacy pleasantly assured her.

When she caught his gaze once or twice the girl smiled, uncertainly.

At last Stacy turned in his chair. "You must forgive my speaking," he said, "I cannot help but be interested in your strange choice of writing room—the music—the dancer's whirling. Is it not all distracting?—And now, my interrupting. But I'm infernally lonely. Do you know what that means? To be absolutely away from every one you know, in a big, cold hotel. Why," Stacy laughed, "it has been a sort of comfort to sit beside you here while you worked. Human companionship, even if given unconsciously. Now, I suppose you will run away."

"I do know what it means to be among strangers in a big city," she answered gravely, "and I wish that I might be more companionable. But I must write. At the strike of twelve I leave," said the girl.

Twelve sounded sooner than either anticipated. Promptly Stacy's companion arose. "Good night," she said.

He thought of her a great deal on the following day. Why had she been there among all those beautifully garbed women in her plain white corded frock? Why had she kept hidden in the interior of an observation balcony, busy with pencil?

"A society reporter; that's the solution," he told himself.

But when James P. Barney decided that the conference must wait another day Stacy decided again to spend his solitary evening watching the dancers from the balcony. He had formed, during the day, an acquaintance with the hotel manager, Mr. Holcomb, who escorted his guest genially to the balcony steps.

"Expect some excitement here this evening," he confided. "Our detectives are after a jewel thief—been entering our rich patrons' rooms."

Stacy was unaccountably perturbed. Uncomfortably he took his seat in the tiny gallery and looked quickly toward the interior. The girl was there. But this time she was sewing. Sewing in a gay place of amusement. The society reporter theory vanished. The girl returned his grave bow and continued her task. But on this occasion she appeared not so composed. Her anxious interest in the affair below was plainly discernible. From time to time she parted the curtains nervously to look down on the dancers. Then, at a slight crowding in a certain part of the hall, the girl snatched a hat and cloak from the chair near by, and in a moment was down the stairs and almost lost in the throng. Almost—Stacy caught up with her as she was joined by a vision of a girl in rose tulle. Together the three reached the street. Then Stacy spoke.

"I thought from your mad haste," he said, quietly, "that you must be in trouble. Can I be of help to you?"

"If you would," the balcony girl breathlessly requested, "call a taxi. We are lodging in Warden street."

Wondering still, Stacy obeyed.

"We were eager to get away, my sister and I," she explained, "because Mr. Holcomb thought there might be a disturbance on the floor, because of the arrest of some jewel thief. Mr. Holcomb is an old friend of our family's. He came from our village. He invited Daphne and me to stop at the hotel, but we preferred to stay where we could afford to pay our way. He has been kind in asking Daphne to the dances. She teaches school in Lyndhurst and has been saving some time for our outing. I am just our homekeeper, but she would have me with her. Good night, and thank you."

"I, too," said Stacy hastily, "am a friend of Mr. Holcomb's."

The taxi went on its way.

Stacy sought at once the hotel manager.

"I have been," he told him, "escorting two young friends of yours to a taxi. Could you make it possible for me to meet her formally?" Mr. Holcomb smiled. "I guess you mean Daphne. I will see that you meet her," he said.

MASTER STRENGTH BUILDER OF 'THE BLOOD'

The Power Behind the Strong
Sturdy Men and Healthy
Beautiful Women of Today

"To make strong, keen, red-blooded Americans there is nothing in my experience which I have found so valuable as organic iron—Nuxated Iron" says Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly Physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York and the Westchester County Hospital. Nuxated Iron by enriching the blood and creating new blood cells strengthens the nerves, rebuilds the weakened tissues and helps to instill renewed energy and endurance into the whole system. It often increases the strength of weak, delicate people in two weeks' time. It is estimated that over 4,000,000 people use Nuxated Iron annually as a tonic, and blood-builder.

MAKE THIS TEST YOURSELF And Find Out Where Your Blood Stands

See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired; next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Numbers of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while have most astonishingly increased their strength and endurance simply by taking iron in the proper form.

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE: Nuxated Iron recommended and prescribed by physicians is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed by all good druggists.
